ABOUT

- Jill Bissonnette and Meghan Johnson — better known as The Snow Moon Twins — are identical twin intuitives from Fall River with a chaotic, hilarious, and deeply intertwined spiritual connection that feels impossible to separate. Living together in Kentucky, the sisters blend mediumship, oracle readings, crystal work, manifestation, remote viewing, and energy healing into one shared practice they describe as "twin power."
- Raised in the haunted energy of the Bridgewater Triangle near the infamous Lizzie Borden House, the twins say they've always experienced a form of twin telepathy. But their connection intensified dramatically after the unexpected death of Meg's husband nearly four years ago.
- Meg describes herself as the "open channel" of the pair, able to connect quickly with spirits and energies, while Jill acts as the grounded anchor who keeps them protected and balanced during readings. Together, they say their abilities amplify each other in ways neither can fully explain. One twin can remotely view a space while the other instantly senses what's inside it. They even joke about telepathically requesting late-night ice cream deliveries from separate bedrooms.
- Outside the spiritual world, the twins live surprisingly normal lives. Jill works for Fanatics as what she jokingly calls an "online cop," while Meg works in creator partnerships for Fourthwall. But once they step into spiritual work together, the energy completely shifts.
- Aside from readings, they also help people dealing with spiritual attachments or unexplained paranormal activity, though they avoid tools like Ouija boards.
- One of the most impactful moments in their journey came when they assisted in the missing persons case of "Famous Dan" in Chicago. Using remote viewing, pendulum work, and intuitive flashes, the twins worked closely with Dan's daughter and correctly identified details surrounding his disappearance and eventual discovery.
