ABOUT

- Ryan is a consciousness trainer, foster care case manager, husband, father, and self-described "Happy Gilmore of the PSI Games." A retired athlete with a background in BMX, motocross, and competitive racing, Ryan brings a completely different energy into the psychic world — trading crystals and incense for adrenaline, competition, and trophies.
- Growing up, Ryan considered himself "lucky," often sensing how situations would unfold, reading people easily, and knowing when something felt right or wrong.
- Following the loss of his mother, Ryan suffered a catastrophic motocross accident where he died for four minutes before being revived. He says when he returned, he experienced heightened awareness, visual overlays, and a dramatically stronger connection to abilities he had only sensed before.
- Ryan believes that experience pushed him to fully develop his gifts. Over the last several years, he has devoted himself to training and refining abilities including precognition, MindSight, psychokinesis, telepathy, dowsing, and remote viewing.
- He calls himself "the first real competitive psychic" and made history at the 2025 PSI Games after testing into all five categories and winning three events. Ryan sees the competition as the psychic equivalent of the Olympics and proudly backs his claims with medals, demonstrations, and results.
- Despite his competitiveness, Ryan's life has always centered around helping others. Raised in a therapeutic foster home, he followed a family tradition of service and now works with foster children and families while also using his abilities with nonverbal individuals and people nearing the end of life.
